A quarry is a place where we dig up the stone and sand we need for building.

The stone and sand is then used for houses, shops, schools, hospitals, roads and for lots of other building work. Special crushed rock is even used in our toothpaste!

However, quarries are dangerous places when children treat them as adventure playgrounds.
Can you spot the dangers in this quarry?

There are at least six. Draw a circle around each:

- deep lakes with very cold water
- steep cliffs
- falling rocks
- quicksand pools
- big machines
- piles of sand that could collapse on top of you

Quarries produce really useful building materials but they are dangerous places to play. There are:

- Can you also spot the safe places to play that are outside the quarry?

There are at least six. Give it a try!

Extra activities:

- Why not design your own safety poster with your friends? Share ideas about what signs and posters would stop you from going into a quarry.
- See if you can list ten places where it is safe to play. This could be anywhere you enjoy playing which is safe – perhaps it is somewhere that you haven’t yet been.

The best advice is to Stay Safe . . . Stay Out
